When hero starts sixth grade at a new school, she's less concerned about literary origins of her Shakespearean name than about the teasing she's sure to suffer because of it. "This book raises the oft-debated question concerning the role of zoos holding animals in captivity for the purpose of protection...more than a good adventure story, this title could be a springboard for discussion." -- School Library Journal

A Junior Library Guild Selection; E. B. White Read Aloud Award;
ALA Notable Book

Marvin is a beetle living under the kitchen sink in the home of James Pompaday, a lonely eleven-year-old boy. When James gets a pen-and-ink set for his birthday, Marvin secretly surprises him by creating a tiny, detailed drawing, which resembles the work of the great Renaissance artist Albrecht Durer. James gets the credit, and soon the newfound friends are swept up in an art heist at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, risking their lives in a fast-paced mystery about stolen art, forgery, and friendship. "Broach packs this fast-moving story with perennially seductive themes: hidden lives and secret friendships, miniature worlds lost to disbelievers. Philosophy pokes through, as does art appreciation... but never at the expense of plot."--

THE SUPERSTITION MOUNTAIN SERIES paperback $7.00; $8.00
(Ages 8-12; Grades 3-6)

A Junior Library Guild Selection

"Broach follows her acclaimed novel Masterpiece with an exciting adventure set in a real-life Arizona mountain range that boasts numerous legends about colorful historical figures, unsolved murders, strange disappearances, and rumors of a hidden gold mine . . . Classic horror and thriller elements combine with modern touches in Broach's page-turner, a very promising start to this series." --Starred, Publishers Weekly
